Wyoming Stock Growers Land Trust Announces the Hiring of New Administrative and Outreach Coordinator

CHEYENNE, Wyo. - The Wyoming Stock Growers Land Trust announced the hire of Kendra Mitchell as the new Administrative and Outreach Coordinator, adding to the administrative support of the organization.

In this position, Kendra will support staff and board members, manage human resources, oversee general office, board and financial management, and will also assist with outreach and event planning efforts.

Kendra recently graduated from Black Hills State University with a Bachelor of Science in Mass Communication and Marketing. She hopes to represent agriculture and help preserve the industry that has been such a passion in her life.

“We are thrilled to welcome Kendra back to our team in a full-time position” says Jessica Crowder, Executive Director. “Kendra’s experiences with agriculture, passion for Wyoming, initiative, and skills in communications and marketing will be an asset to the Wyoming Stock Growers Land Trust.”

Kendra is familiar with the staff and mission of the Land Trust, having served as the Communications and Events Intern during the summer of 2023. Throughout her summer with the Land Trust, Kendra developed a desire to help protect agricultural resources in her home state of Wyoming.

"I am so excited to be joining the Wyoming Stock Growers Land Trust team once again. My internship last summer with the organization helped me realize just how passionate I am about protecting the agriculture industry and its legacy, and now I get to assist the Land Trust in this mission full time!" said Kendra.

A native of Douglas, Wyoming, Kendra's passion for agriculture began at an early age through her family's involvement in rodeo, ranching, 4-H, and FFA.
